WELCOME TO FENWAY PARK

We want to welcome you to friendly Fenway Park. Since Fenway Park opened in 1912 generations of families have come here from all over New England. That tremendous support built a family atmosphere that has been traditional here over the past 74 years.

The Red Sox have been a key franchise in baseball since the American League was founded in 1901. Boston was known as the Pilgrims at that time and played its home games at the Huntington Avenue grounds where Northeastern University now stands. The Red Sox nickname was adopted in 1907 and in 1912 the team moved into Fenway Park.

There have been cosmetic changes here over the years but the playing field is virtually the same today as it was in 1934. That winter new owner, Thomas A. Yawkey, put the park through a major reconstruction phase. The 23-foot-tall screen was put above the left field wall in 1936 and the bullpens were constructed in front of the bleachers in 1940. Arc lights were installed in 1947 and the messageboard in centerfield was part of construction project after the 1975 season that included a rebuilding of the left field wall, with padding added around the outfield walls as a safety measure. In 1982-83 luxury suites were built atop the grandstand roof.

Yet, throughout the years, the famous "Green Monster" wall, the intriguing angles and corners around the outfield, and the closeness of the crowd to the action have helped make Fenway Park an exciting and captivating place to watch baseball.

COACH

JOHN (WALT)
HRINIAK #33

Age: 42. Turns 43 May 22; Born: May 22, 1943, North Andover, Mass. Ht.: 5-11; Wt.: 178. Green eyes. Blond hair. Bats: Left; Throws: Right. Home: North Andover, Mass.

Hriniaik is the Red Sox hitting coach. Over the years he has won respect throughout baseball for his work with many of the Red Sox hitters. Walter is a keen student of the game who devotes countless hours instructing and helping Red Sox personnel. Despite shoulder problems that necessitated surgery he is still recognized as one of the best batting practice pitchers in the game. This is Hriniaik's 10th season as a Red Sox coach.

Before joining the Red Sox in 1977 Hriniaik put in 16 years as a player, coach and minor league manager. He managed Montreal's rookie team at Lethbridge, Alb., Can. in the Pioneer League in 1976 after starting the year as a coach with Denver. In 1974-75 he was first base coach with the Expos, following two years as manager of their Jamestown team in the NYP League.

Hriniaik signed a reported $50,000 contract with the Milwaukee Braves in 1961 after an outstanding career at Natick, Mass. H.S. He was an All Scholastic choice as a shortstop, football quarterback and hockey center. His 13-year pro playing career included two years with the Braves and Padres as a catcher in 1968-69.

He conducts a hitting school for youngsters for several weeks in the off-season.

COACH

CHARLES (FISH, BILL)
FISCHER #34

Age: 55; Born: October 11, 1930, Wausau, Wis. Ht.: 6-0; Wt.: 210. Blue eyes. Brown hair. Bats and Throws: Right. Home: Beverly, Mass. Married: Valeria Hager.

1986 is Fischer's second year as the Red Sox pitching coach. He came to John McNamara's staff from Kansas City where he had been a minor league pitching instructor in 1984. Prior to that assignment Bill was the pitching coach for Cincinnati where he worked with McNamara in 1979-82 and with Russ Nixon in 1983.

Fischer was signed by the Chicago White Sox in 1948. His pitching career lasted 20 years, which included nine seasons in the major leagues. Along with the White Sox he also pitched for Detroit, Washington, the Kansas City A's and Minnesota. Bill served in the Marine Corps for two years (1952-54).

Fischer is known for his outstanding ability to throw strikes. He holds the major league record for most consecutive innings without giving up a base on balls, 84.1. In 1965 he pitched a 1-0 shutout for Indianapolis in which 70 of his 90 pitches were strikes.

Bill was a scout for the new Kansas City Royals from 1969-74 and was their minor league pitching instructor from 1975-78. After his stint in Cincinnati he returned to the Royals in 1984 serving in the same capacity as he did when he left. In 1976 he received the Ewing M. Kauffman Award for his outstanding contribution to the Kansas City organization.

MANAGER

JOHN FRANCIS (JOHN) McNAMARA #1

Age: 53, Turns 54 June 4; Born: June 4, 1932, Sacramento, Cal. Ht.: 5-10; Wt.: 175. Blue eyes, Brown hair. Bats and Throws: Right. Home: Natick, Mass. Married Ellen Goode.

The Red Sox finished 81-81 in John McNamara's first season in Boston. Seven major disabling injuries, including four on the pitching staff, hampered McNamara's managerial efforts. He used 79 different lineups, 18 different starting players and 13 starting pitchers. Despite the uncertainty of the pitching staff, McNamara's hurlers allowed the second least home runs, ranked third in strikeouts and the 4.06 ERA was the club's best since 1982.

On Oct. 18, 1984 McNamara was named the 36th manager of the Red Sox. He replaced Ralph Houk who retired after four years at Boston. McNamara is starting his 13th full year as a major league manager. Only Sparky Anderson (Detroit) and Gene Mauch (Angels) hold seniority over him among A.L. managers.

Entering 1986 McNamara's major league record was 832-886, including 329-332 in four years in the A.L.

McNamara managed the California Angels for two seasons. In 1984 the Angels finished in a second place tie with Minnesota at 81-81. In 1983 injuries crippled the Angels and they finished tied for fifth at 70-92. They were in first place as late as July 10, 1983.

McNamara was a minor league manager for nine years in the Kansas City A's organization before being named a coach with the A's in 1968 when they moved to Oakland. He has been in the major leagues ever since as either a manager or coach. John made his major league managerial debut with Oakland when he replaced Hank Bauer, Sept. 19, 1969. He led the A's to a second place finish in 1970.

His coaching stints include San Francisco (1971-73) and California (1978). He managed a young San Diego team from 1974 through May 28, 1977. The Padres record improved each year.

McNamara piloted Cincinnati from 1979 through July 20, 1982. He led the Reds to the N.L. West title in 1979 and in 1980 they finished only 3½ games out of first. In the strike-shortened 1981 season the Reds had the best overall record in baseball although they did not appear in post-season play.

McNamara was a minor league catcher and also pitched in 14 games over four years. He attended Sacramento State College and spent two years in the military.

BATTING CHAMPIONS

WADE BOGGS

CARL YASTRZEMSKI

by Tom Bross

With hitting a predominant characteristic of Red Sox teams during the past half century, it should surprise no one that Boston players have won an impressive number of batting championships. Wade Boggs, of course, led in 1985, finishing with a club-record 240 hits for a .368 average. Including that accomplishment and beginning with the 1932 season, there have been 18 Red Sox batting titles, more than any other club in the American and National Leagues for that period (Pittsburgh is second with 14).

It's Sunday. How come you're shaving?

Because we're going to the game.

Are we sitting by the cheerleaders?

At a baseball game? Very funny.

Actually, I just wanted to shave.

You really love that Norelco, don't you?

Well it is America's leading electric.

Besides, it gives me a close shave.

As close as a blade?

Yep. Feel.

Wow.

See, Norelco is the only electric with lifters inside that raise the whisker up, so the blades can shave razor-close.

It's a real performance machine.

Bet you'd cry if it ever broke down.

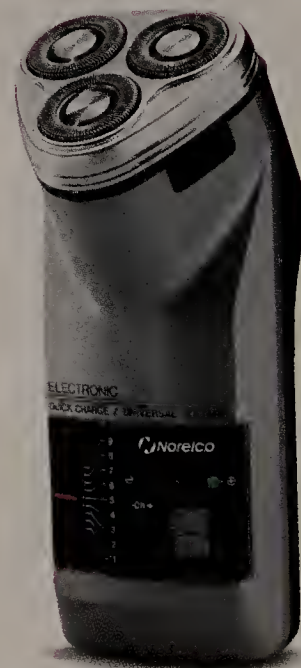

Nope. It's got a money-back guarantee and a full two-year warranty.

What happens when it runs out of juice?

I just plug it in, and bingo, I've got the fastest, longest-lasting charge of any leading razor.

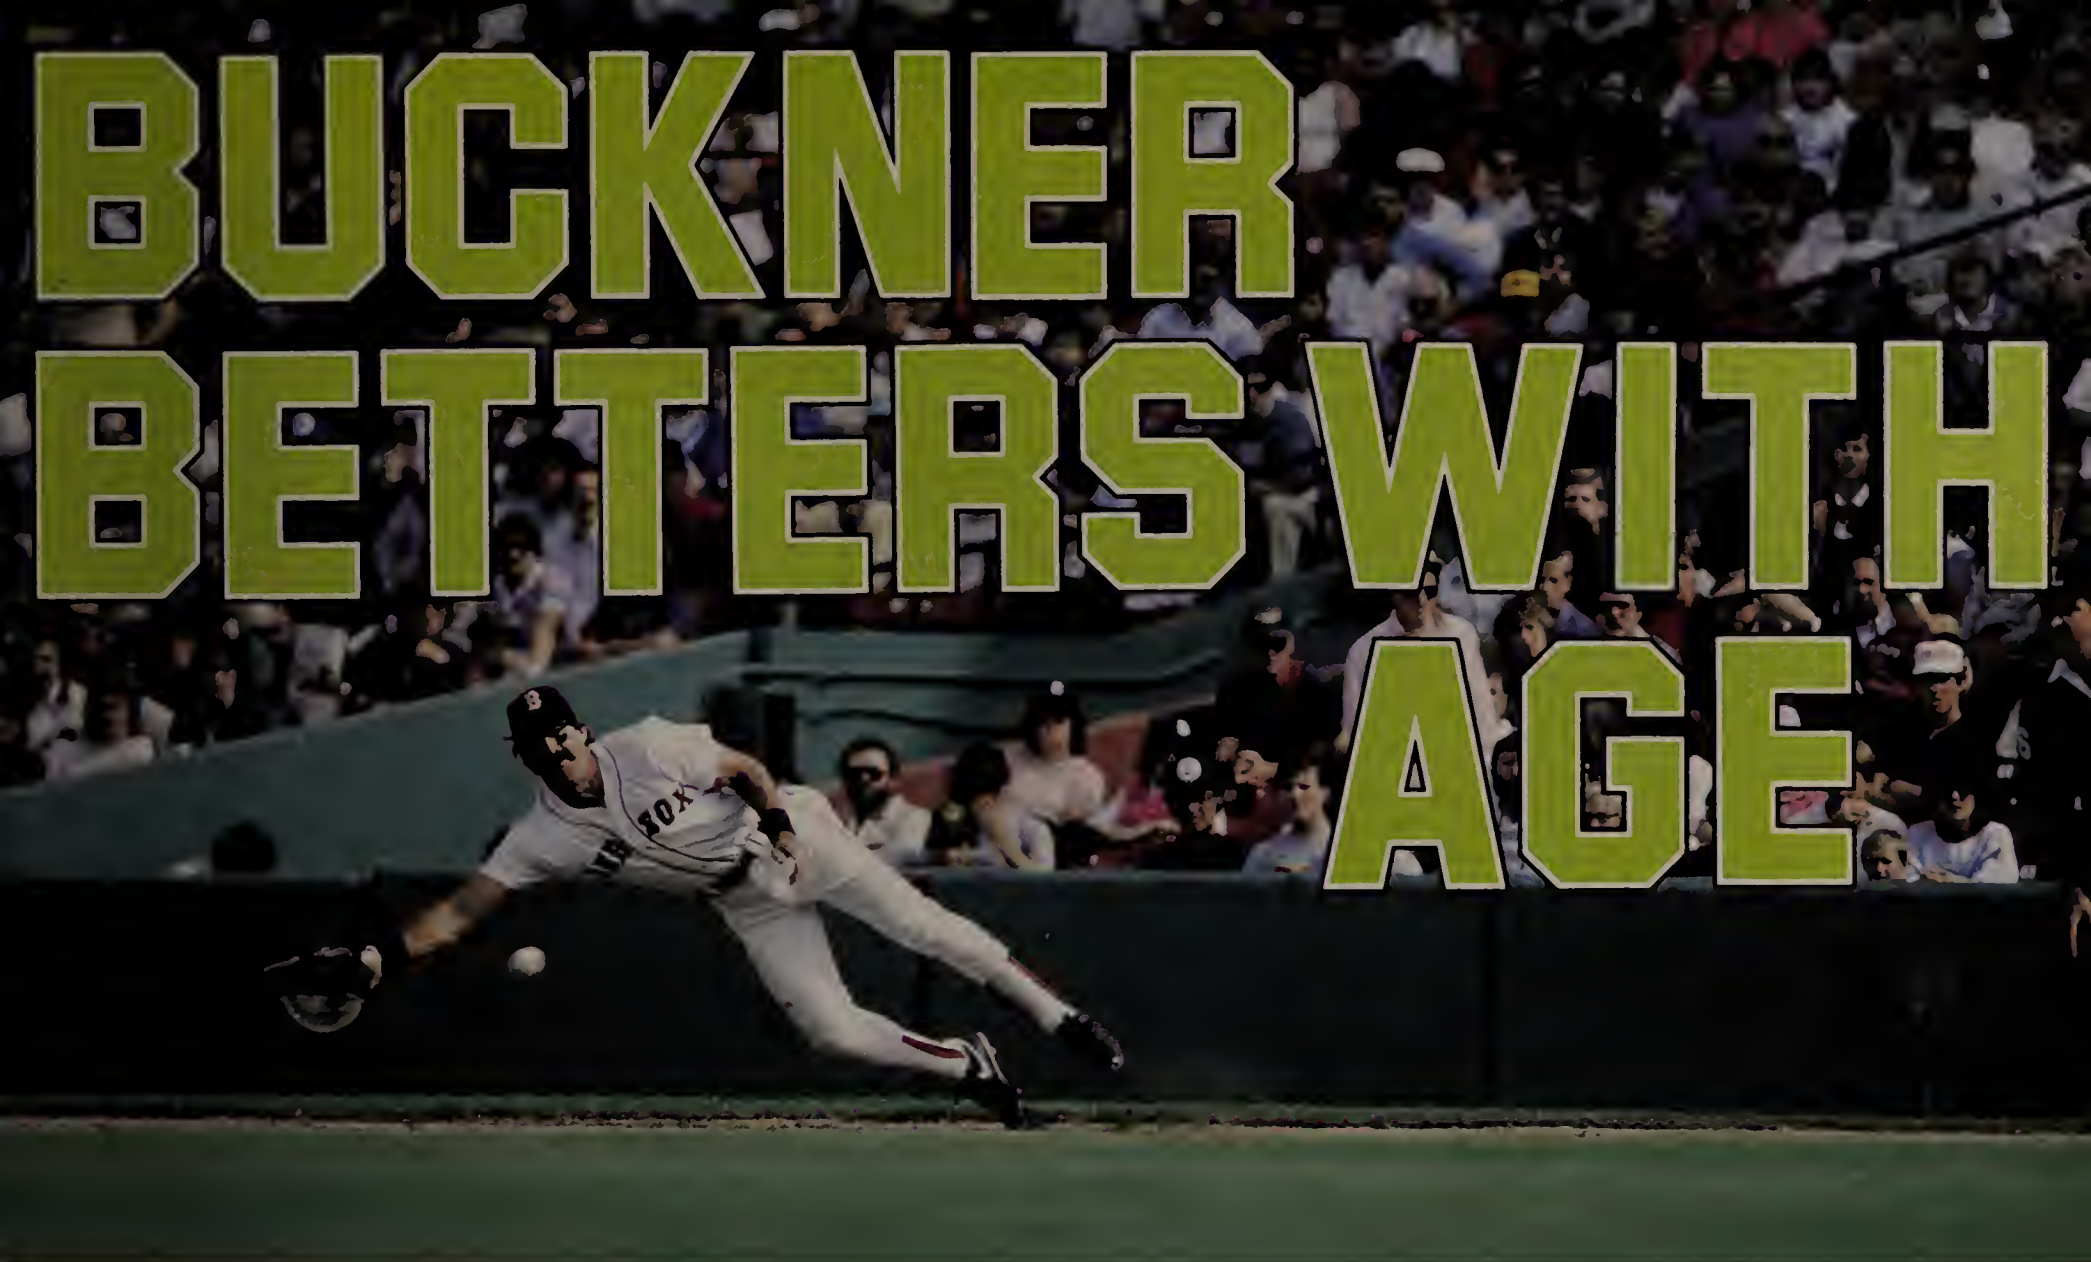

Speaking of long-lasting charges...

Forget it, we'll be late for the game.

Give Bill Buckner a situation. Any Situation.

Bases loaded?

When the house was full in 1985 he hit .389 (7-18) in 22 plate appearances. No strikeouts, No doubleplays. A team-high 21 RBI.

Timely hitting?

Ten of his 16 homers either tied the score or put the Red Sox ahead, and 10 came from the fifth inning on. With runners at third with less than two outs? Buckner drove in 36 of 49 runners. And when the chips were down and the opposing pitcher got ahead on the count 0-2? Piece of cake for Buckner; a .583 average with three homers, making a lot of opposing managers upset with their pitchers.

Need a base stolen?

The team's oldest starter swiped 18 in 22 attempts.

And who played left for the Dodgers when Hank Aaron hit No. 715? You guessed it, Bill Buckner.

There were so many numbers surrounding Buckner, but the most impressive one was 35. That's how old he was in 1985 when he played in 162 games, hit .299, was second in the American League in at-bats (673) (a new Red Sox left-handed record), second in the league in doubles (46), and he achieved the second 200-hit season of his illustrious career.

He was in pain every step of the way.

"My ankle hurts all the time. But I've learned to live with that. I love playing baseball so much, that it's the price I have to pay. But I'm willing to do it."

Since undergoing surgery on his left ankle (to remove a tendon) in Sept. of 1975, about the time the Red Sox were marching to the American League title, and then again in October (to remove bone chips), about the time the Red Sox were in the World Series against the Cincinnati Reds, Buckner has had to make alterations.

"I noticed a drop-off in my physical ability after getting hurt. I knew I really had to take care of myself and do things faithfully if I wanted to have a long career."

Needless to say, Buckner did.

BUCKNER BETTERS WITH AGE

When he returned in 1976, Buckner hit .301 and stole a career-high 28 bases in his final season with the Los Angeles Dodgers, the team which drafted him second in the 1968 June draft.

Buckner excelled in his seven-plus seasons with the Chicago Cubs hitting better than .300 four of the seven years. He won the National League batting crown in 1980 hitting .324. In 1982, Buckner surpassed the 100-RBI mark for the first time, knocking in 105 runs while hitting .306.

The times were not all good in Chicago. The end, in fact, was bitter for one of Chicago's most popular athletes.

With Leon Durham showing potential, Dallas Green decided to go with the big slugger as his everyday first baseman.

Buckner lashed out at management. For the first time in his career he was taking a back seat.

He was labeled a problem player and after much deliberation he finally agreed to a trade which brought him to Boston on May 25, 1984 for right-handed pitcher Dennis Eckersley and shortstop Mike Brumley.

It proved to be a good deal for both teams. Eckersley went 10-8 after being traded to the Cubs and helped them toward an N.L. East Division title. Brumley is still considered a top prospect.

The man the Cubs didn't think could be their everyday first baseman anymore, has missed only five games since joining the Red Sox lineup on May 26, 1984.

Buckner is determined to keep his performance level high, hoping to play another two or three years — every day.

"If I miss a game it's like I've missed a month. I'm obsessed with playing baseball. I hate someone taking my job for even a day. I don't get tired. To me it's easier to play every game. It's part of my routine. If I don't play it's almost as if my routine is thrown off schedule."

Prior to night games, Buckner usually arrives at the stadium at 3 p.m., whether he's home or on the road. After tending to his ankle, he spends considerable time working under the tutelage of hitting instructor Walt Hriniaak. "I wish I'd met Walt about 15 years ago. He's helped me and so many other guys out. I've probably learned more about hitting the past two years, than I had in all my career."

A native of Napa, Calif. Buckner was a football and baseball star at Napa High and later attended Arizona State University and the University of Southern California. He comes from an athletic family background — older brother Bob was a minor league infielder and a scout for the Chicago Cubs and younger brother Jim, was a minor league outfielder for nine years.

Now in his 16th season, Buckner has been around so long that he's seen many of his contemporaries retire from the game. The player drafted No. 1 by the Dodgers in the 1968 draft is none other than Texas Rangers' manager Bobby Valentine.

But Buckner doesn't feel so old.

"This is probably the best I've felt in the past few years. I'm in excellent shape and there's been no drop off, really, for the past few years."

Besides his excellent numbers, there are other intangible parts of Buckner's game which are impossible to measure, but which are just as important.

He is seen as the true team leader, perhaps the most respected player on the team. His enthusiasm is that of a rookie fighting for his first job — an enthusiasm that rarely waivers despite the circumstances.

During a low-point in late May when the Red Sox dropped to sixth, six games below .500, Buckner was trying to generate something. In a May 26th game in Texas, twice Buckner was thrown out on the basepaths trying to take the extra base, once at the plate.

After the 5-3 loss, Buckner sat in the dugout for several minutes looking out into the hot and muggy Texas air. He then walked into the clubhouse after kicking several bats and balls and said that his teammates needed to take more chances, create more opportunities in an effort to stop the skid. The next day against Minnesota the Red Sox won their first of three straight and went on to post a 17-2 streak. At its conclusion on June 17, the Red Sox were 2½ games behind first-place Toronto in second place.

"He's just a real inspiring person," said second baseman Marty Barrett. "You look at a guy his age and you think if he can still work that hard and perform that well at his age, the rest of us can, too."

Buckner hopes his aggressiveness rubs off. "Anybody in the big leagues can steal 10 bases a year. It doesn't require great speed. All it requires is applying fundamental baserunning techniques and having the guts to take a chance. Big deal if you get thrown out? It's worse if you never try. You really have to create your own breaks in this game. Anytime you can put yourself in scoring position, you've helped your team."

Buckner's stubbornness to play cost him his eighth .300 season. With two hits in his first three at-bats in his final game of the year he exceeded .300. But instead of preserving the average, he elected to stay in the game and wound up popping out in his final two times up, falling to .299.

in 1942-43, No. 27 in 1944 and
No. 21, 1946-49

THEN: Over a three season period, he won 52 games including a club record 13 straight at Fenway Park. And in a career both interrupted by military service and cut short by an arm ailment, he ran up a 96-54 record for a .640 winning lifetime percentage, the third best in Red Sox history. But Cecil Carlton “Tex” Hughson was more than simply a good, winning pitcher. He finished nearly two of every three games he started for the Red Sox, he loved pitching in Fenway Park, and his career earned run average, 2.94, showed that he did well in what has been a graveyard for many hurlers over the years. Tex Hughson retired (back to Texas, naturally) after the 1949 season but you can still find his name scattered through the club’s all-time pitching records. He’s in the Boston book for career innings, most wins, most shutouts, most complete games and as single season leader in most pitching categories in several World War II years. His personal bests were 22 wins and a .786 percentage (22-6) in 1942 when he also had 22 complete games and pitched 281 innings, a 2.26 earned run average in 1944, 172 strikeouts and six shutouts in 1946 when he helped lead the Red Sox to the World Series against the St. Louis Cardinals. A three-time American League All-Star, he formed a one-two pitching punch with Dave “Boo” Ferriss at a time when the Red Sox boasted one of the most feared batting orders in the major leagues.

NOW: Tex Hughson marked his 70th birthday in February and celebrated by visiting the Red Sox Winter Haven spring training home for the third straight year because he still loves baseball and particularly the Red Sox. While he hasn’t been to Fenway Park often since his retirement as an active player, he sees a good deal of the club during the regular season. He installed a satellite antenna three years ago and is therefore able to pick up many televised games both from Boston and when the club is playing on the road. But he is coming back to Fenway on May 17 for the

DALE ALEXANDER

TED WILLIAMS

We start with 1932 for what is purely a home-town reason. It was the year of the first batting crown in Red Sox history. Tris Speaker, Boston's hitting great of an earlier era, 1909-1915, had a .344 lifetime average but never a Red Sox title, because Ty Cobb dominated those years. When Speaker, in 1912, had 222 hits to set the team record (which Boggs broke in 1985), his average was .383 — yet he finished third in the batting race behind Cobb's .410 and Joe Jackson's .395. Irony: Speaker went from Boston to Cleveland in 1916 and, as a player-manager, hit .386 to win the only batting championship of his long career.

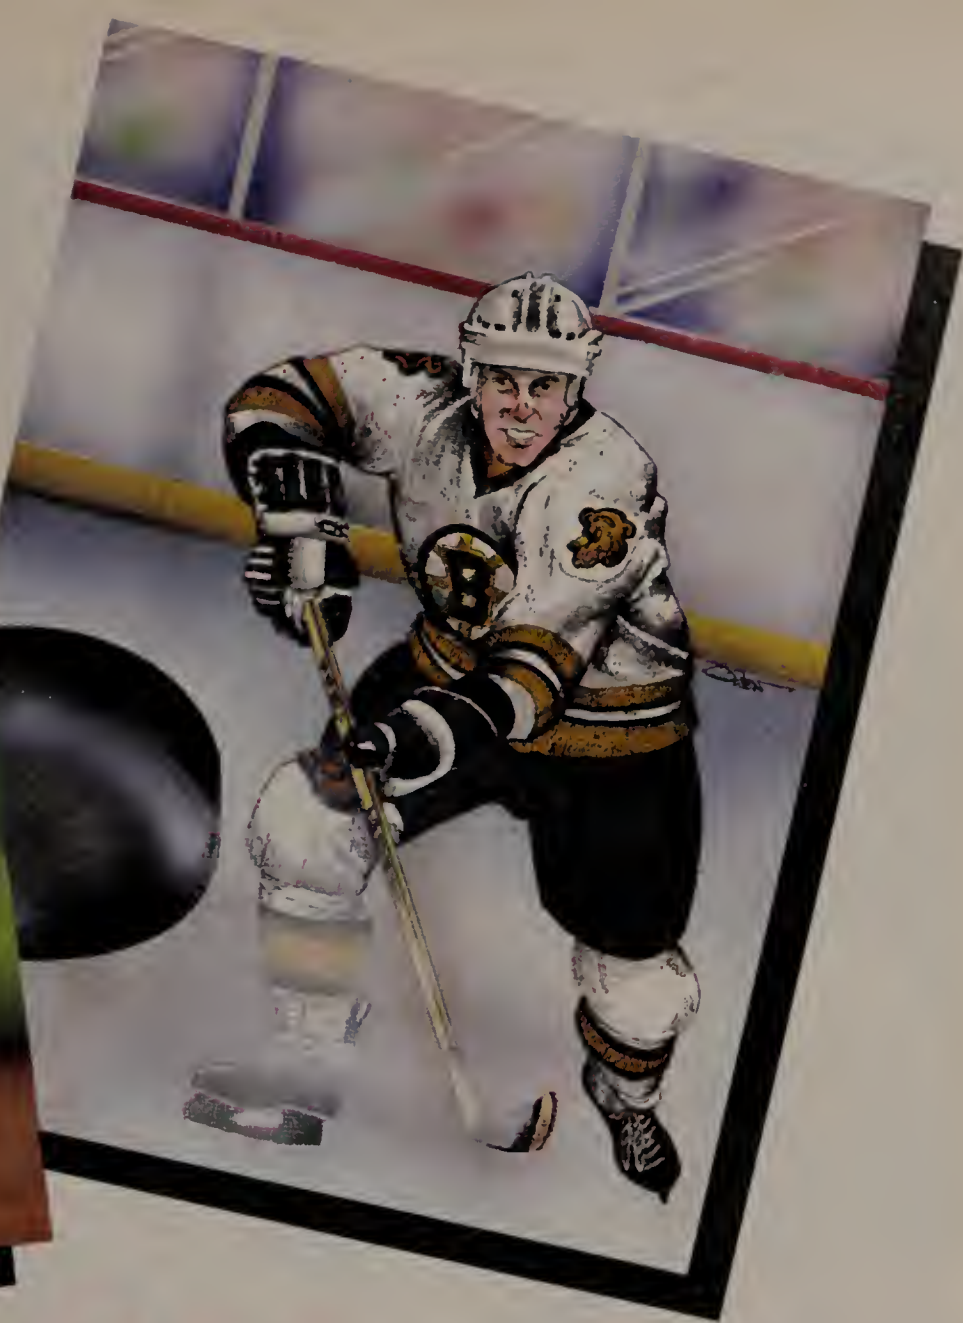

First baseman Dale Alexander took the honors in 1932. He is the American League's only player to have done it while spending a season with two teams, for he appeared in 23 games for Detroit before coming to Boston for 101 more. (In 1947, Harry Walker played 10 games with the Cardinals then 130 games with the Phillies when he won the National League crown.) On June 12th, Alexander and outfielder Roy Johnson were traded to the Red Sox for right fielder Earl Webb, who in 1931 rapped out 67 doubles — still the all-time major league record. Alexander's .367 average in '32 made him the league leader but — more irony — statistical nitpickers will forever claim that he was eight at-bats shy of the requisite 400 and thus wasn't quite officially the champion. Ironies and "almosts," as we shall see, are scattered throughout the annals of Red Sox titles. Alexander, indeed the champion of record in 1932, was gone from the big leagues following subpar hitting and forgettable fielding the year after. Roy Johnson, incidentally, stayed on and starred for Boston, hitting over .300 in three successive seasons, '33 through '35.

When Jimmie Foxx was a Philadelphia Athletic in 1932, he hit .364 to place him second by three points behind Dale Alexander. Though he had 585 at-bats that year compared with Alexander's 392, Jimmie didn't get the crown. But in 1938 he became Boston's second batting champion with a .349 average. He'd come from the A's to the Red Sox in a transaction made on December 10, 1935, surely one of the best bargain deals in team history. Foxx and pitcher John Marcum cost Boston $150,000, plus pitcher Gordon Rhodes and catcher George Savino. Rhodes, 2-10 with the Sox in '35, went to 9-20 for the last-place A's in '36. Savino never made it to the big leagues. Boston newcomer Marcum, a worthwhile 17-12 with Philadelphia in '35, dipped to 8-13 in '36 and was soon gone. But Foxx? In his first year as the Red Sox first baseman, he set team records for home runs (41) and RBI (143). Two years later, his RBI total was 175, the all-time Red Sox record and fourth highest in major league history.

The Foxx era leads directly into the Ted Williams era, and with him we can account for six of the team's 18 batting championships. Can there be a fan alive, child or adult, who does not know that Ted hit .406 in 1941? It was his third season, he was just 23 years old (second-place Cecil Travis of Washington finished 47 points behind) and, no one in the majors has reached .400 since. Williams led with .356 the following year, followed by teammate Johnny Pesky's .331 (Pesky had a league-leading

As you probably know, Lou Gorman is never at a loss for words. When the Red Sox' general manager was at the World Series last year, he was quite frank about what he needed to do. Actually, it was something he had been trying to get accomplished for what must have already seemed like an eternity.

"We have to strengthen our bullpen," Gorman said in St. Louis in October. "We just lost too many games this year from the seventh inning on. We lost something like 31 games in the seventh, eighth and ninth innings. We won 81 games. Even if you only turn half of those losses around, we win 96 or 97 ballgames."

You know what that would mean. Contention. Serious contention. So, Gorman, who had some legitimate dealing problems because of contract situations, went out and did the best he could over the winter. And it's no surprise two of the key new faces on this ballclub belong to relief pitchers.

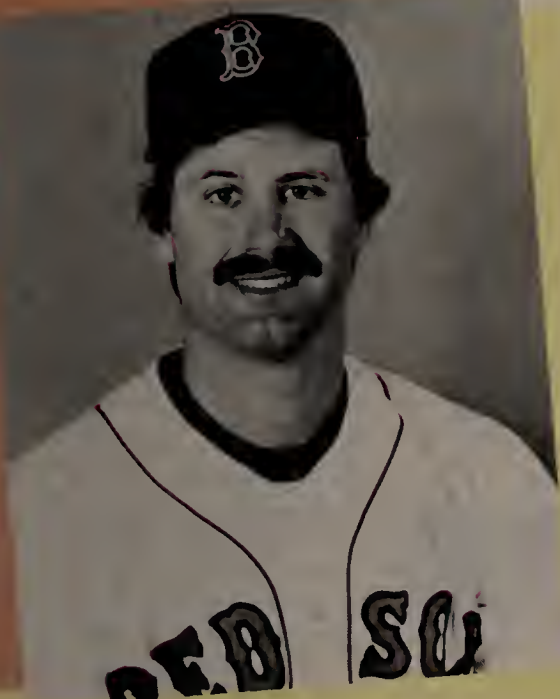

At the winter meetings, the Red Sox swung a pair of deals — neither adding a reliever but both subtracting pitchers from the overall picture — and left several things on the table. The San Diego swaps brought utility infielder Ed Romero from Milwaukee for Mark Clear, who clearly needed a change of scenery. Charlie Mitchell, the Fireman of the Year in the International League in 1984, went to Minnesota for local product Mike Stenhouse.

But two of the teams Gorman had been talking to at those meetings proved fruitful. In fact, you could say one of the transactions was actually closed BEFORE the winter meetings ended. The Sox sent Jackie Gutierrez to Baltimore for veteran role pitcher Sammy Stewart.

Back on Nov. 13, a biggie. The Mets, in a position where one more veteran could win it for them, wanted Bob Ojeda. The Red Sox wanted both Wes Gardner and Calvin Schiraldi. The Mets originally — in St. Louis — said they wouldn't part with BOTH pitching prospects — one or the other, but not both.

Push came to shove and the pitching-rich Mets agreed. Gardner, Schiraldi and outfielders John Christensen and LaSchelle Tarver were headed to Boston for Ojeda and three minor-leaguers, including Tommy McCarthy, who had pitched for the Sox on the big-league level.

Four deals by Gorman, who would later add Joe Sambito as a non-roster invitee, hoping the once outstanding lefty reliever could find it again.

Back to the bullpen. When we called Stewart a role pitcher, we meant he can do everything. Thirty-one and a free spirit not famous for following all the rules in Baltimore, the righthander was 51-45 with 42 saves and a 3.47 ERA in Baltimore, where he also pitched in two post-seasons and helped win a world championship. He pitched 307 regular-season games for the Birds, including 25 as a starter. In short, he's a man who could do it all. Hence, the role pitcher tag. "I DID everything in Baltimore," Stewart said this spring. "They'd ask me to start two hours before a game and I'd start. It didn't bother me at all."

Gardner doesn't start. He's a short reliever — not in stature (he's 6-4) but in job description. He's 25 (Apr. 29) and has only one major-league save to his credit. But like Mitchell in 1984, he was the International League's top reliever in '85. The Red Sox are counting on him to be the man to close games down this year. Not saying that Bob Stanley, Stewart and Steve Crawford can't finish jobs they already start, but Gardner has to show the ability to come on during late rallies and shut them down. The job is there, and the kid was ready to go for it when spring training began.

"That's my intention," he said before the exhibitions began. "I believe in myself. I've put together good numbers at Tidewater the last two years (38 saves) and the last 10 games I pitched in New York I pitched well and started gaining confidence. I feel confident. Now, it's just a matter of going out and doing the things I have to do to get ready and prove I deserve to be in that role."

The Mets rushed Gardner along because of an injury to Doug Sisk in 1984, and he didn't do well. As he points out, the situation in New York was a bit more "pressure-packed" because of the contending situation. Here, if he pitches well he can turn a team into a contender. It's a different spot.

RED SOX PLAY BY PLAY

RED SOX GAMES COME TO YOU ON RADIO AND T.V.
BY WAY OF CAMPBELL SPORTS, TV 38 AND NESN CABLE.

Red Sox fans will once again receive coverage on both radio and television in 1986 via one of the most extensive broadcast schedules in the major leagues.

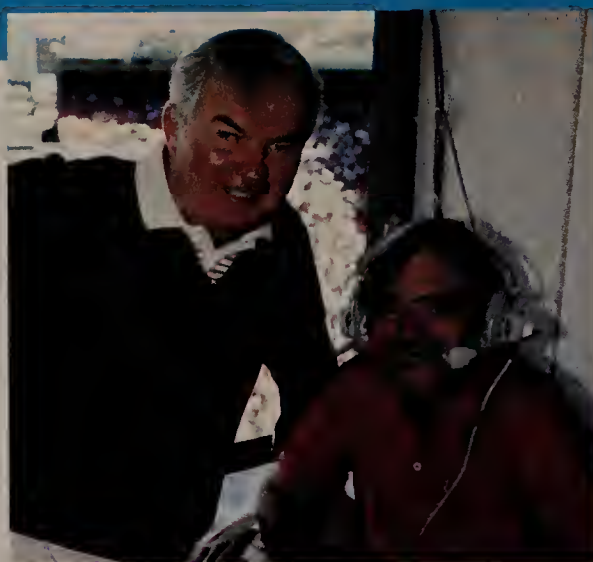

The Campbell Red Sox Baseball Radio Network is again carrying every Red Sox game on radio in 1986 with Ken Coleman and Joe Castiglione sharing the microphone for the fourth season. The partnership between the Red Sox and Campbell Sports is also entering its fourth year and is slated to continue at least through 1989. WPLM-FM in Plymouth, Mass. is the flagship station of a network of over 65 stations which blankets New England.

Coleman has more than 35 years of broadcasting experience and has covered the Red Sox on radio and TV for 17 years. The Quincy, Mass. native began his career broadcasting the Rutland (Vt.) Royals of the now defunct Northern League. He then went to Cleveland where he did the Browns (NFL) for 14 seasons and the Indians for 10.

In 1966 Ken returned to Boston for his first stint with the Red Sox (1966-74) on both radio and TV. After covering the Cincinnati Reds on TV for four years, he came back to Boston once again for the 1979 season on radio, and has been here ever since.

Ken has announced seven NFL championship games on network television and also did the 1967 World Series on NBC. He has been involved with the Jimmy Fund since 1966, and is now its coordinator for donor relations.

Castiglione is in his fourth season on Red Sox radio. Like Coleman, he previously covered the Cleveland Indians (1979-80-82) on both radio and TV. He worked the Milwaukee Brewers' games on cable TV in 1981. The Hamden, Conn. native has announced the Cleveland Cavaliers (NBA) on cable, and has done college basketball for New England Sports Network the past two winters. He is a graduate of Colgate University.

Ken Coleman and Joe Castiglione

Every Red Sox game will also be shown on television this season, with TV38 carrying 75 games and New England Sports Network (NESN) showing 84 on cable. The other three games are scheduled on network television.

TV38, and its New England network, is in its 12th season of Red Sox coverage, with Ned Martin and Bob Montgomery together for the fifth year.

Martin has been covering the Red Sox on TV and radio for 26 consecutive seasons, including the last eight with TV38. Only Ernie Harwell of the Tigers (27 years) has been with one club for a longer consecutive span.

Ned began his broadcasting career in Charleston, West Virginia, covering the American Association team there for five years. He joined Curt Gowdy in Boston for the 1961 season and has been here ever since, working with ten different partners in that time.

Martin announced the A.L. playoffs on CBS radio four years, and also did the 1975 World Series on television for NBC. The Duke graduate is also an accomplished football announcer, having done play-by-play for the Patriots (1965), Dartmouth (7 years), Harvard (6 years), and Yale (2 years).

Montgomery has been on the TV38 crew for five seasons, following his retirement as a player. He was a valuable reserve catcher for the Red Sox, appearing in 387 games during his 10 year major league career. He signed with Boston in 1962 and came to the majors in 1970. An arm injury forced his retirement during spring training in 1980.

Monty did a local radio talk show, as well as some work on the Red Sox radio broadcasts, prior to joining the television team in 1982.

NESN is covering the Red Sox for the third year, with Martin and Montgomery handling the announcing for their 84-game schedule. NESN rebroadcasts each of its Red Sox games as a convenience for its subscribers who may have missed the live telecast. Evening games are shown again at 11:30 p.m., while afternoon games are rebroadcast at 7:30 p.m.

It's Easy to Keep Score

Baseball Shorthand, as used by the news media to render every game more enjoyable to baseball enthusiasts. All players are numbered and all plays recorded by symbols. For symbols and example of system, see below.

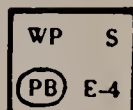

CODE NUMBER OF PLAYERS AS FOLLOWS

Pitcher	1	Second Baseman	4	Left Fielder	7
Catcher	2	Third Baseman	5	Center Fielder	8
First Baseman	3	Shortstop	6	Right Fielder	9

SYMBOLS FOR PLAYS

Single	—	Fielder's Choice	FC	Passed Ball	PB

Triple	≡	Wild Pitch	WP	Struck Out	K
Home Run	≡≡	Stolen Base	SB	Base on Balls	BB
Reached base on error	E	Sacrifice	SAC	Force Out	FO

The lower lefthand corner of the scoring block should be considered as home plate. Progress is counter-clockwise with progress to first base indicated in lower righthand corner, to second in upper righthand corner, to third in upper lefthand corner and to home in lower left. In example to left, batter reached first on an error by the second baseman, stole second, went to third on a wild pitch and scored on a passed ball. BUCKNER BETTERS WITH AGE

"I just felt the team needed me in the game. It was the last game and we really wanted to end the year on a positive note and above .500."

But the Red Sox lost, 9-6 to the Milwaukee Brewers.

His efforts — which included personal bests in doubles, total bases (301) and RBI (110); and tying his personal high in home runs (16) — didn't go unnoticed. Over the winter the Boston Baseball Writers honored him with their Special Achievement Award.

He was the model of consistency. He hit .299 at home and on the road; .291 against lefties with four HR and 38 RBI, and .302 against right-handers. Buckner left no reason for Manager John McNamara to pinch-hit for him against tough lefties.

Batting primarily in the No. 3 spot in the order, Buckner produced 183 runs, more than any Red Sox player.

Buckner was somewhat disappointed in his home run production. Last spring he spent much time working on a new swing with Hriniak, designed to generate more power. "This year I understand what I'm trying to do. And hopefully I can hit about 20 homers. Basically I'm just trying to generate more power with my legs."

There is no inkling of retirement in Buckner's voice. He is signed through next year with a club option for 1988.

"I'm proud of the years I've put in and that I'm still a productive player who helps the team. There aren't many guys who have played as long as I have, who can still play every day. Pete Rose is 43 and still playing well. Though this is probably Pete's last year, I wonder if he feels he can keep playing?"

"Like Pete, they'll probably have to tear the uniform off my back."

Two new all-stars join the line-up.

Now you can enjoy the richer chocolate taste of chewy, nutty Baby Ruth and crispy, crunchy, peanut-buttery Butterfinger while you enjoy the game. Look for them both at the concession stand.

EQUITABLE BRINGS THE OLD-TIMERS HOME.

THE EQUITABLE OLD-TIMERS' SERIES

Things have changed.

Hot dogs used to be 5¢. The season was only 154 games long. And kids could see a doubleheader for half a buck.

What hasn't changed, though, is America's love for baseball's greats. At Equitable, we share the feeling and are proud to be the sole sponsor of the first official old-timers' series.

Games are played on weekends from May through September and are held at all 26 Major League ballparks. For the first time ever, fans in every town can see their childhood heroes take to the field.

This is just another one of our commitments to professional baseball. In fact, we've been providing financial opportunities to the Major Leagues since 1947.

Maybe you should touch base with us and see what opportunities we can provide for you.

While Schiraldi, a college teammate of Roger Clemens' at Texas, faced difficult odds of making this team in spring training, there was a definite role for Christensen, who was to have faced competition from Kevin Romine for a job Reid Nichols had back in 1983. That was Carl Yastrzemski's last year. Ralph Houk liked to play Nichols against left-handers, but also put him in the outfield and let one of the regulars DH for a rest. Christensen and Romine are both good athletes who can do what Nichols did and let Mike Easler sit against tough lefties.

Both Christensen and Romine had poor seasons last year.

Christensen, who had trouble adjusting to a part-time role, was thrilled to get out of the Mets' crowded outfield picture. "I'm happy to be going somewhere else," he said at the time of the trade. "I had no future with the Mets. I have no hard feelings but I asked them to trade me (Gardner also asked for a move)."

After reporting to Winter Haven, Christensen, 25, said, "Last year was very tough for me. I never got a chance to start too many days in a row (he hit .186 in 51 games). But they (the Sox) are looking for a righthanded DH and someone to play the outfield, and I think I'm capable of doing that."

Tarver, who can run, had a rough debut for this club. He came to bat with men on first and second, no one out and the Sox trailing the Tigers 3-0 in the ninth inning of the spring's first game. On the first pitch he saw from Bill Campbell, Tarver lined one through the middle that turned into a triple play that ended the game. "I won't forget that one, my first at-bat in Boston. Call me Rally Killer."

Just before the exhibition games began, Milwaukee manager George Bamberger made a prediction. "You watch and see. Eddie Romero's gonna end up starting at shortstop for the Red Sox." Well, Glenn Hoffman naturally had something to say about that, but the Sox were convinced they'd picked up a valuable extra part that would give John McNamara more flexibility.

"I love it," Romero said of his move to Boston. "I'm happy to be here. This is a good ballclub, a good bunch of guys. I'm enjoying it." Romero said shortstop is "definitely" his best position, but is ready to do anything to help the club win. He feels Milwaukee was in a "rebuilding situation" where the Red Sox have a chance to contend. "They have a great lineup here. There's a lot of proven good hitters." And now, there's a proven 29-year-old utility infielder.

Sambito came to camp hoping to have to put up with Fenway Park's Green Monster. "The way I look at it, if I ever see the Green Monster, that means I have a job. I've succeeded." Even with all the question marks surrounding the Sox' pitching, Sambito had to try to force his way in, as did folks like Schiraldi, Rob Woodward and Jeff Sellers. Then there was old face Mike Trujillo, and old/new face Mike Brown.

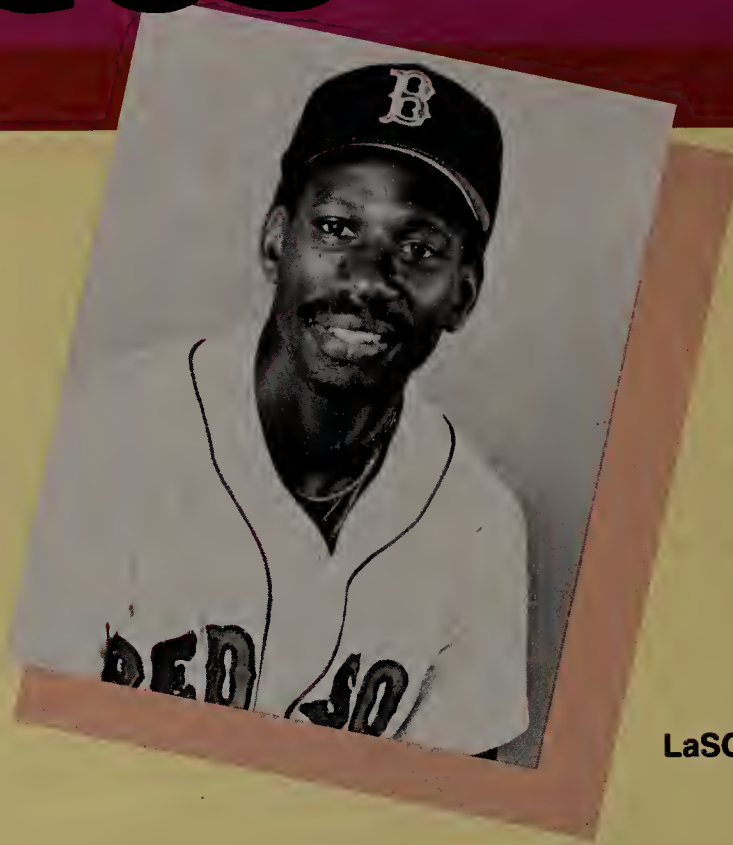

Oh yes, we haven't really heard much from Mr. Stewart. Well, if you ever get to talk to this man, you'll realize there's a lot to hear. The guy is famous for his Earl Weaver and Paul Lynde impressions and can make the Sox clubhouse a better place to be. After promising to "sue" if the trade was overturned, Stewart went about the business of getting ready.

"A couple of people have been patting me on the back and saying, 'you know, you may be just what we need to loosen us up a little bit.' I'm no comedian but yet I like to have a lot of fun — and I want to get to know these guys. I don't want to be a smart aleck or a know-it-all, but come in here and get these people to accept (me) and don't go on first impressions. Get to know people and be yourself. Heck, I find it hard to be anybody else. I think it would be a task to be anybody else besides yourself."

Soon after, Sammy Stewart broke into his Earl Weaver impression proving it's not all that hard for him to be somebody else.

TEX HUGHSON

reunion of the 1946 American League champion Red Sox. Tex went into the family's wholesale meat packing business after his playing days and later into cattle and real estate. He lives in San Marcos, Texas which he describes as being on the main highway halfway between Dallas - Ft. Worth and San Antonio. He's had some physical problems but his sense of humor is fully intact and he still knows his baseball.

MEMORIES: "The older I get, the better I used to pitch. I like the designated hitter as long as I don't have to pitch against it. I was never much of a hitter. As my career progressed, I got worse. I never got to hit in the spring so I got constantly worse during the season. (Tex had a .119 career batting average.) So I'd like the DH when I'm watching, not when I'm pitching against it. I'd like to see it in the National League. When I'm watching a game, I'd rather see the DH up there. But if I was pitching myself, I'd rather have the automatic out.

"The whole philosophy of pitching has changed. That's the main change I see in baseball. In my day, starting pitchers expected to go the complete game. It used to be that a relief pitcher was a worn out starter who couldn't go nine."

"Now, they have a lot of good young arms as relief pitchers and starters don't expect to go more than six or seven innings.

"I do think today's salaries are ridiculous. I didn't make that much when I was playing. In my day, when we had eight teams, a .240 hitter got sent back to the minor leagues.

"I'm for the players. I blame today's salaries on people like (Ted) Turner and (George) Steinbrenner. Players don't hold guns to the owner's heads. But I do think the idea of agents is great. The good representatives, not all of them. I know when I talked salary with Eddie Collins (Red Sox general manager at the time), he was a man who had been doing it for 20 years. He could intimidate you — you can't make any money like that.

"I don't see much difference in today's players. I have heard complaints from newspaper people about how they don't handle players today the same way they used to. Managers can't get tough with them. But anybody who plays in the major leagues has got to love the game, he's got to give you his best.

"It has concerned me, I don't know whether teams are babying some young players, or if they're overprotective. I'm not that close or intimate with the game now but I do wonder about that. Other than that, I don't see an awful lot of difference in the game.

"I was up at Fenway one time with Early Wynn and he was asking me about pitching in Fenway Park. I loved it, I knew we had a ball club that could score runs, that I had a lot better chance to win there than I would in a big ball park like Chicago.

"With the power we had, I knew if I could hold on for two or three innings, we could win it. In 1942, I won three extra inning games.

"But it was not always that way. In 1946, we won 41 of 50 at the start of the season. Of the nine losses, I had four of them, the rest of the staff had five. And five of my wins when I won 13 straight at Fenway in 1944 were by one run.

"They say that pitching is 75 per cent of the game. At least. If you look at the outstanding ball clubs over the years, when they won, they had good pitching.

"I was highly disappointed about last season. After seeing the team in Winter Haven, I thought they had a good opportunity to be a contender. I never expected a .500 ball club.

"But it was the pitching. When (Roger) Clemens got hurt and two or three of the others didn't do well, that was it. As I say, it's still the pitching, you've got to have it.

"I think Clemens is a fine prospect. I watched him in college — I live 30 miles from Austin where he played. I watched him in Omaha, Neb. in the College World Series. And, of course, I've seen him pitch for the Red Sox when he has been healthy.

"Those Texas Longhorn teams produce some fine players. They've got another young pitching prospect there now (Greg Swindell), a helluva prospect. He's a junior left hander, nearly as big as Clemens. As a freshman and sophomore, he didn't throw quite as hard as Clemens but he's got a good curveball and good control. The scouts down here tell me he will be drafted high when the next draft comes up."

Tex Hughson may be 70 and out of baseball for a few years but he can still verbally put the high hard one over the plate.

BATTING CHAMPIONS

205 hits). Then, coming back from World War II, Ted's .342 was runner-up to Mickey Vernon's .353 in 1946 before he was tops again with .343 in '47 and .369 in '48.

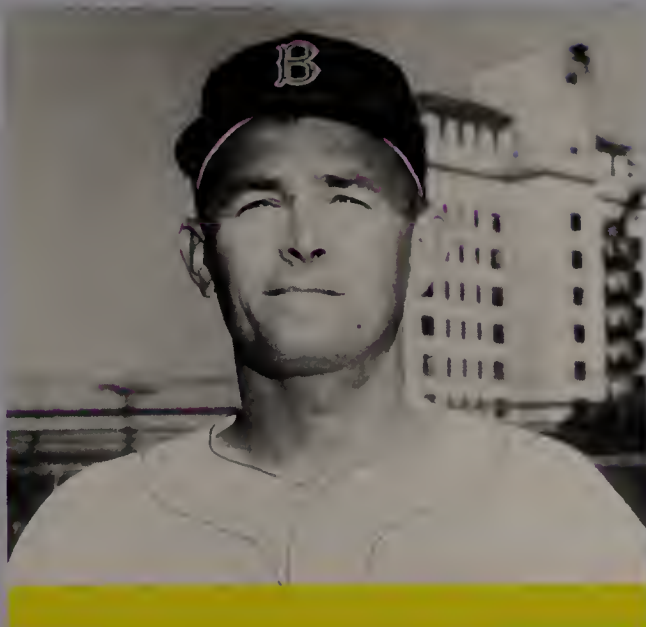

He was second again the following season, and it was a famous "almost." Williams and Detroit's George Kell (later like Vernon, to become a Red Sox teammate) both finished at .343. On the last day of the 1949 campaign, however, the Tiger third baseman got two hits off Bob Lemon while Ted went 0 for 2 against New York's Vic Raschi. Kell won the championship by two-tenths of a point, a squeaker that cost Williams the triple crown. Moreover, the Red Sox lost the pennant in Yankee Stadium that October day.

The next season, 1950, brought Billy Goodman into the limelight, for his .354 average led the league. Goodman's special distinction is that he was the first utilityman to become a batting champ—playing 45 games in the outfield, 27 at third, 21 at first, five at second base and one at shortstop that year.

Another "almost" occurred in 1954, and it again involved Williams. Boston's Hall of Famer hit .345 in 117 games and led the league with 136 walks. But he didn't lead the league in batting, because he was 14 official at bats short of the necessary 400 (shades of Dale Alexander 22 years earlier). So Cleveland's Bobby Avila, with 555 at-bats and a .341 average, had the title. Avila, like Vernon and Kell, would eventually be in a Red Sox lineup with Ted.

Starting in 1957 the batting title qualification rule was changed to state that a player must have 3.1 plate appearances, times the number of his team's scheduled games to be eligible.

Many people consider Williams' accomplishment in 1957 to be the shiniest example of his greatness. Consider that he turned 39 during that season and that he'd gone off to war not once but twice. In terms of his epic .406 in 1941, the closest anyone had come to that in the years following was Stan Musial, who hit .376 for the Cardinals in 1947. In '57, Ted topped that by 12 points to win his fifth title. His .388 average went with a .731 slugging percentage—merely four points below that of '41, when "The Kid" really was a kid.

Pete Runnels came from the Senators to the Red Sox (for Norm Zauchin and Albie Pearson) in 1958 and joined Williams in a one-two teammate finish for the title, Williams winning his sixth and last championship with a .328 average, six points ahead of infielder Runnels. That one went to the final game of the season, when Williams got the edge with a double and home run in four at-bats in Washington.

Then Runnels was the leader with .320 in '60 and .326 in '62. The spray-hitting Texan had spent his Washington-Boston career as an infield handyman and, true to this form, played at first, second and third for the Red Sox in 1960. Thus he and Billy Goodman are big-league baseball's only utilitymen bat champs. Odd twist: Runnels, while hitting his league-leading .326 in 1962, played full time at first base—the only time in 12 full seasons he was a one-position infielder.

CARL YASTRZEMSKI

BILL GOODMAN

The Carl Yastrzemski era is marked by three batting championships: .321 in 1963, .326 in the "Impossible Dream" and triple crown year of 1967 and .301 in 1968. In '65, his .312 was second to Tony Oliva's .321 with Minnesota. He also wound up second in 1970, and that's another famous "almost." On the season's final day, Yaz had a .0013 percentage edge over Alex Johnson, a much-traded, singles-hitting outfielder then in his first American League year with the California Angels. Johnson needed at least two hits in the Angels' finale at Anaheim to pass Yaz. He went two for three, then left the game to protect his lead. Result: Johnson finished with .3289, Yaz with .3286.

Yaz's .301 average in '68 is the lowest in major-league history to earn a batting championship. That takes nothing away from his ability, for 1968 was a somewhat phenomenal pitcher's year. There were four 20-game winners in the league, led by Denny McLain's 31-6, and, moreover, six pitchers had ERA's under 2.00, led by Luis Tiant's 1.60 with Cleveland (Bob Gibson had a stunning 1.12 ERA in the National League). The overall American League batting average was .230 that year, while the ERA aggregate was a stingy 2.98 — the lowest since 1918!

Fred Lynn came on to burn up the American League in his rookie year, 1975, leading in doubles, runs and slugging percentage, winning unprecedented Rookie of the Year and Most Valuable Player awards. His .331 batting average placed him second to the Twin's Rod Carew (.359). Lynn simmered down during the next three seasons, then came back with a bang in 1979 to capture the batting championship on the strength of a .333 mark.

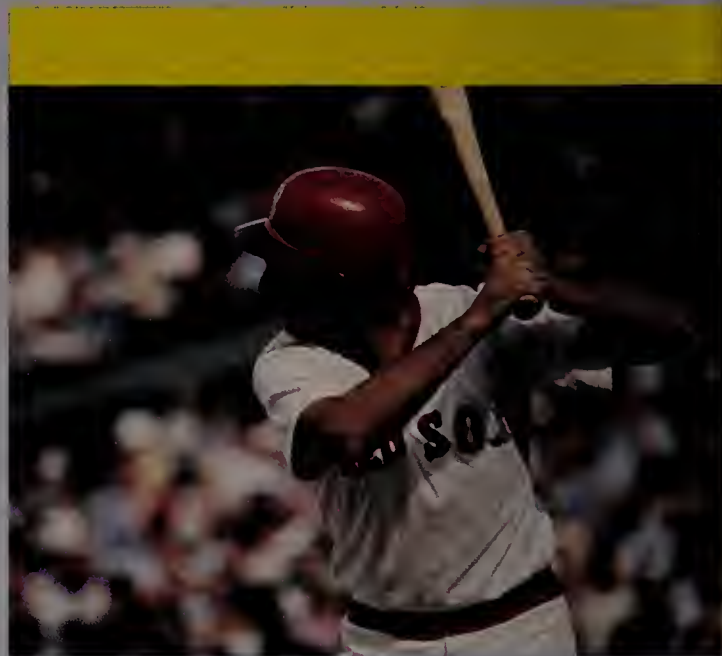

WADE BOGGS

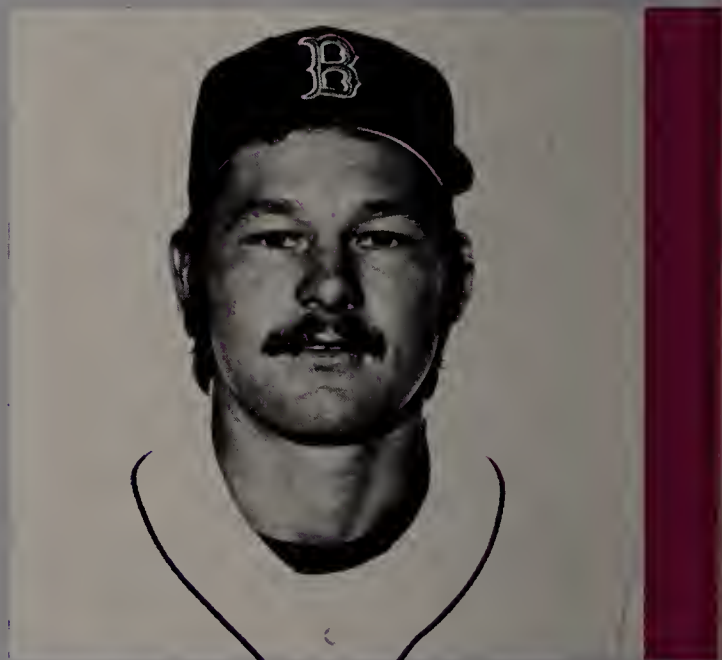

Carney Lansford, along with Mark Clear and Rick Miller, joined the Sox in a December 1980 trade which sent Rick Burleson and Butch Hobson to the California Angels. Third baseman Lansford promptly took the batting crown with a strong .336 average for the strike-shortened 1981 season. Because Carney's '82 season was interrupted by a June collision injury at home plate in Fenway Park, a rookie benchwarmer named Wade Boggs got an opportunity to play. Boggs got into 104 games at third, first, in the outfield and as a DH that year, had 338 at-bats and a .349 average. That was yet another Red Sox batting-title "almost" — but it was certainly a sign of great things to come.

Greatness, in fact, came the very next year. Given a shot at the third baseman's job after Lansford was traded to Oakland (with Garry Hancock and Jerome King) for Tony Armas and Jeff Newman, Boggs banged out 210 hits and batted .361, far outdistancing Rod Carew's .339 to top the league.

All of which brings us to the hitting splurge of 1985, when Boggs won his second championship and the team's 18th. It's a whole new era!

ARBY'S GETS THE BIGHIT FOR BIG BROTHERS.. ..BIG SISTERS

Players up to bat may put a little extra swing into their hits, now that new honors for RBI leaders are at stake. Arby's, the world's largest roast beef sandwich chain, will be honoring the top two RBI players in 1986 for the National and American leagues. Individual RBI leaders from the 26 major league teams also will be given awards.

And Arby's is going to bat for kids by contributing $1,000 for each run batted in by the National and American League RBI leaders during the 1986 season to the Big Brothers/Big Sisters of America organization (BB/BSA). Total donations by Arby's are expected to total nearly $250,000.

As members of the Major League Baseball community, we are extremely excited about the opportunity for our outstanding players to get the recognition they deserve and at the same time to focus on thousands of deserving children who need love and attention.

Why recognize an RBI leader? According to Baseball Commissioner Peter Ueberroth, "Never before has the real meat-and-potatoes guy on a ball club been recognized for his contribution."

And baseball has never been bigger. With 90 percent of the population watching baseball at some point in the season, yearly attendance topping 50 million, and more than 20 million Americans playing baseball, it's certainly earning its claim to fame as America's most popular sport.

Last year fans watched player Don Mattingly of the New York Yankees bat his way to become RBI leader in the American League, while Dave Parker, with the Cincinnati Reds, led in the National League.

Why Big Brothers/Big Sisters? The number of single-parent families is growing. More than 13 million children in the U.S. are growing up in one of these households, often where the parent must work to maintain the household and can't fulfill all the child's needs. That's where Big Brothers and Big Sisters comes in — to provide extended family support systems.

The time is right for this kind of promotion between a major corporation, a sports organization, and a worthy community service. Baseball has never been bigger and at the same time, the number of children in single-parent families is rising.

Of course all you Red Sox fans here in Boston are going to be watching and rooting for your favorite RBI contender. Will Bill Buckner do it again this year and win our local Arby's RBI Award and shoot for the national title?

There's nothing like the kind of relationship between an adult and a child who are friends and support each other.

Big Brothers/Big Sisters is the only national youth-serving organization based on one-to-one friendship between an adult and a child. Volunteers make a commitment to spend three to six hours a week for at least a year with a Little Brother or Sister, sharing experiences and just listening to any concerns.

The organization began in 1903 and has now grown to more than 450 local agencies serving more than 100,000 children across the country.

The BB/BSA program is important to Major League Baseball and Arby's because we consider ourselves family oriented and want to do all we can to promote the welfare of children throughout the country by providing them with a big brother or big sister.

Arby's RBI AWARD

America's #1 Roast Beef Restaurant Salutes Baseball's RBI Leaders.

THE START OF A NEW TRADITION.

A new tradition begins this season as Arby's, an official sponsor of Major League Baseball, recognizes the RBI leaders in both the American and National leagues with the all new Arby's RBI award. This marks the first time Major League Baseball's RBI leaders will be officially recognized with their own award. Arby's will present the award each year at the World Series to both league leaders.

GOING TO BAT FOR KIDS

At Arby's, we also want to make a better life for children everywhere. So, we are giving the Big Brothers/Big Sisters Organization $1,000 for every RBI generated each season by the National and American league RBI leaders. Based on past RBI performance, this will add up to at least $250,000 each year for Big Brothers/Big Sisters. On our team, every kid's a winner!

LOCAL ARBY'S RBI AWARDS

Arby's will also present the award to the RBI leaders of each Major League team and selected minor league and amateur teams. Check your sports section and your local Arby's for further news about local Arby's RBI awards and updates on the national program.
